

— PRACTICE

AI for proposals: where it helps, where it hurts

SWIPE ►

— WHAT WORKS

Reusing what you already wrote

Past project descriptions, staff resumes, and boilerplate are the highest value place to start, because the source material is already yours and already approved.

Tailoring to the selection criteria

Matching your experience to what the RFP actually scores is a sorting problem, and sorting is where a model is fast and consistent.

— WHERE IT HURTS

Anything a reviewer can check

Invented project references, wrong credentials, and numbers nobody verified are how firms lose a shortlist and their credibility in the same afternoon.

— A E C E N T R I C

Draft with the tool, verify with your people

Claims about your projects and your staff have to be checked by someone who knows them. That review is not optional.

Full breakdown at the link in bio.

