people problem,
not a tools

Training beats tooling

A great tool handed to an untrained team sits unused. A modest tool with a clear ten minute walkthrough gets adopted the same week.

Trust is earned in public

Let the team watch the tool get something wrong and see how you handle it. Silence about failures kills trust faster than the failure itself.

— WHAT WORKS

Fit the workflow, not the demo

The tool needs to slot into the review, sign off, and file naming your team already uses, or people quietly route around it.

— A E C E N T R I C

Start with the people, not the platform

Before you buy anything, map who touches the workflow, what they will stop doing, and who owns the outcome.
